Defending the rights of migrants is at the heart of MRN's work. We aim to ensure that migrants have the power and opportunities to influence the policies which shape their lives.

Our work is based on the following core activities

- Developing a dynamic and diverse network that builds bridges across different sectors and interests, and helps to get migrants' voices heard where it matters
- Sharing information and expertise, and building knowledge and skills across different migrant communities
- Keeping our network informed with news on immigration, including providing up-to-date blogs, policy analysis, briefing papers, reports and informing campaign priorities
- Supporting national and regional debates about immigration issues and strengthening the presence of local voices at national level
- Raising awareness among government and those in the public sphere about migrants' interests and needs so that they can be involved in debates about migration

If you would like to support our work then you might wish to consider becoming a MRN Supporting Member. Your contribution will help us make the case for a fair immigration system that meets the needs of a modern Britain.
